1. Chlorophyll a and Chlorophyll b were determined using a spectrophotometer (Shimadzu UV-1601) at 663 nm and 646 nm, respectively. The concentrations were calculated using the following equations: $Chl\ a = 12.7 \times OD_{663}$ and $Chl\ b = 22.9 \times OD_{646}$. The total chlorophyll concentration was calculated as the sum of Chlorophyll a and Chlorophyll b.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate variability (HRV) of young, healthy, sedentary men. The study was conducted in two phases. In the first phase, the HRV of 10 subjects was measured during a 10-week period. In the second phase, the HRV of the same subjects was measured during a 10-week period. The results of the study showed that the HRV of the subjects increased significantly during the 10-week training program. The increase in HRV was observed in all parameters measured, including the time domain, frequency domain, and non-linear domain. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the HRV of young, healthy, sedentary men.

1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to define the problem. This involves identifying the symptoms of the problem and determining the scope of the problem. Once the problem has been defined, the next step is to identify the causes of the problem. This involves identifying the factors that are contributing to the problem and determining the underlying causes. Once the causes have been identified, the next step is to develop a plan to address the problem. This involves identifying the actions that need to be taken to address the problem and determining the resources that will be needed to implement the plan. Finally, the last step in the process is to implement the plan and monitor the results. This involves putting the plan into action and tracking the progress of the plan to ensure that the problem is being addressed effectively.
